

Toliara, Atsimo-Andrefana, Madagascar

Known as the "City of the Sun," Toliara opens the door to one of Earth's most bizarre ecosystems — the spiny forest — plus ancient baobabs, Vezo fishermen in outrigger pirogues, and beautiful coral reefs just a short drive up the coast.

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

- Cash is king. Malagasy Ariary (MGA) is the currency; Euros are widely accepted by drivers and vendors. Credit cards rarely work outside upscale hotels. ATMs exist in town (BNI, BFV-SG) but can run out of cash — bring small Euro notes.
- Extreme heat. Toliara is one of the sunniest, driest cities in Madagascar. Wear a hat, light clothing, and high-SPF sunscreen, and carry plenty of bottled water. Don't walk long distances in midday sun.
- Negotiate before you board. Always agree on a fare with tuk-tuks, taxis, and pousse-pousse before getting in. A town ride costs 5,000–10,000 MGA (~$1–2). Day taxis to Ifaty run €40–60 EUR.
- Watch what you buy. The craft market sells sea shells, dried starfish, and tortoise-shell items — many are CITES-protected and will be confiscated by customs. Stick to wood carvings, textiles (lambas), and vanilla.
- Eat seafood. Fresh lobster (langouste), mangrove crabs, and red snapper are superb and cheap. Try L'Étoile de Mer or Le Corto Maltese on the seafront road for a proper Malagasy lunch.
- Small ships only. Mahavatsy Pier accepts vessels up to ~640 ft (195 m). If your ship is larger, check with the crew — you may be tendering instead.
